Events of Interest From Washington.

By J. E. Jones.

THE DIFFERENCE IN WHOSE OX IS GORED.

Many people who cannot understand the war enthusiasm in the different European countries ought to refresh their memories regarding their own war of "watchful waiting time." Very recently the United States was ablaze with enthusiasm for war, and the government held it off with difficulty. On a former occasion President McKinley stood as a check to this same war spirit, and only let loose the guns of battle when our justification to take up arms against the enemy had been fully established. Americans who are wondering whether Europe has gone crazy should recall their own excited mental condition when the question of war or peace confronted the United States.

OUR ARMY AND NAVY.

Contracts have been assigned for three new dreadnaughts for the United States navy. These new instruments of warfare will be forty-one feet longer and of 4500 tons displacement than any now in the United States service. It may be that before Europe gets through that the question of what country has the greatest navy will be settled, as our chances for first place are very good. About the same time that the contracts were let for the new dreadnaughts, Major General Leonard Wood submitted his annual report to the Secretary of War. It shows that the actual strength of the army is 4,300 officers and 80,000 enlisted men scattered over the world. The General declares that to maintain the force in the United States for even a small expedition in police work of the Department that it is vitally important that the regular army be substantially increased.

PRESIDENT SEES TWO MOONS.

The Washington papers gave considerable prominence to the big chief, Two Moons of the northern Cheyenne tribe, living in the Tongue River country, in Montana. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs took Two Moons to see the President. Would it not have been more interesting had the series featured the fact that the President saw Two Moons, which is more significant than seeing a single moon, and would have made room for Mr. Wilson as a competitor of the man who saw

"Two moons rise over the city, When there ought to have been but one."

One Two Moons was a conspicuous figure in the "Custer massacre," and can talk the Indian sign language.

THE RECLAMATION FUND.

A fund of about $50,000,000 has been accumulated through the sale of public lands which under the old law was in the hands of the Interior Department for expenditure in reclamation projects without Congressional limitations. Congress recently became somewhat jealous of this method of expenditure, and the House provided that all expenditures in future should be limited to appropriations made from the reclamation funds by Congress. Representatives from public lands states have vigorously opposed this change, but the powerful Democratic leader Underwood with his seat in Democrats, are having their way.

NAVAL LINES TO SOUTH AMERICA.

The probabilities are that the United States will carry out the plan suggested by the Secretary of the Navy of establishing naval lines to carry mail, passengers, and freight to South America. Federal works ago Senator Weeks introduced a bill to this effect, and he has recently passed the Senate.

EASTERN RAILROADS LOSE.

Sandwiched in among the news on the back pages has appeared the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in reference to the application of the eastern railroads for a five per cent. increase in freight rates. The application was made by the railroads four years ago, and the decision is in effect a denial of the petition of the roads, although permission for increased rates on some commodities in parts of the territory involved have been granted. In New England the trunk line territory everything has been denied. It is estimated that the

CHURCH FAIRS

LADIES' CLUB FAIR

Aug. 13 the Ladies' Club of the Congregational Society held its mid-summer fair at Garland Chapel. The fancy table contained exquisite needle work; the table of the busy girls, and here many articles useful and ornamental were for sale. The apron table had aprons of many designs both useful and the more dress up kind. The ice cream and home made candy tables were very tempting to lovers of the "sweets of life." The table of Miss Cross, with its potted ferns and pillows filled with lavender and first carried a fragrance which will awaken memories of Bethel in the minds of the purchasers.

The parlor was aglow with flowers and the bouquets appealed to the lovers of these bright, cheerful blossoms. Miss True presided most graciously at the tea table, which was a place for rest and sociability as well as refreshment.

The supper served at 6.15 was of the usual high standard and the tables were filled and refilled.

The ladies are much gratified with their financial success and the cheerful atmosphere that was manifested as old friends met and chatted and strangers were welcomed.

WEST BETHEL LAWN PARTY

It was a gala day Tuesday for those who were fortunate enough to be able to attend the lawn party of the West Bethel Union Church. Despite the threatening aspect of the weather, which, to be sure, gave "friend pessimist" ample opportunity to voice his pestiferous lamentations—the ardor and enthusiasm of the happy throng was in no way dampened. At seemed to have a most enjoyable time from the moment of their arrival until they were compelled to leave because of the lateness of the hour. "The Birchies," better known as "Grove's Birchies," interspersed with booths and tables and rustic seats all artistically decorated, presented a most attractive appearance. Indeed so inviting was the picture that many total strangers who happened to be passing by were constrained to stop.

During the early part of the afternoon the base ball game between the home team and that from Bethel proved to be most exciting. One would have thought that the contestants were of professional standing, at least for the first eight innings, for the pitchers who allowed but few hits, were well supported by both infield and outfield. Many brilliant plays being executed by both teams. The score at the last of the eighth was 5 to 4 in favor of the home team, and then in the first of the ninth the timely hitting of the Bethel team and the costly errors of the locals turned the tide, and the final score, 11 to 5, showed conclusively how apparent defeat may be turned into victory at the last moment. The Bethel team deserve much credit for their "earned victory." Captain Dean Martin, the "West Bethel" and Captain Robert Thurston of the "Birchies" are negotiating for a return game to be played sometime in the very near future.

Immediately after the game "The Birchies" became the center of attraction, and from that time on the merriest and most jovial of the crowd, combined with the gratifying activity of the helpers of the booths, was unintermittent. Too much praise cannot be given to the efficient work of all those who had anything to do with the conduct of the several booths. As it was highly gratifying to see how well they all were rewarded for their pains by having most all their things which they had for sale either bought or chosen for.

The largeness of the people of West Bethel seems to be exhaustive. All sorts of articles, both useful and ornamental, as well as many clothes, were for sale, so that even the most particular were really satisfied. Especially noteworthy was the work of Mrs. Adams' Green's "Flower class"—a class composed of little girls and boys approximately 10 years of age. The officers, who served the entertainment committee had secured for the evening's entertainment, unfortunately failed to put in an appearance owing to the fact that two of the musicians were out of town and were unable to be reached. The rest of the program which had been arranged was successfully omitted on account of the rain.

BETHEL PROGRESSIVES

Enthusiastic Rally Addressed by Hon. H. P. Gardner

Hon. Herbert P. Gardner the Progressive candidate for Governor addressed an attentive audience in the Odeon Hall last Saturday evening. Over 200 were present and the rapid attention showed that his speech was well received.

The rally was opened with a prayer by Rev. W. C. Curtis, after which Mr. N. R. Springer introduced Mr. Gardner, who was received with loud applause.

Mr. Gardner told what the Progressive party stands for and that it places man above the dollar. He discussed the various planks of the three parties and said it was for the voters to decide which of the three parties was sincere. He said neither the Republican nor Democratic parties wanted enforcement of the liquor law and simply used the Prohibition law for political purposes. He defined his stand on the question and said that he considered that prohibition was for the development of sobriety and temperance rather than for revenue or political expediency.

He spoke in favor of the workmen's compensation law and the employer's liability act, showing the justice and humanitarianism that would result from their enactment.

He also told of his visit to Col. Roosevelt in regard to his coming to Maine, and showed how unfair the press was toward the Progressive party.

The rally was a success in every way and did much toward strengthening the cause of progressivism.

SOCIALIST OPEN-AIR RALLY

Tuesday evening, Aug. 18, saw the first open air rally ever held in Bethel. That evening the Socialist party held a meeting in front of the post office. For over an hour and a half, despite occasional showers, a crowd numbered at one time a hundred persons, listened to the speakers, George A. England of Bryant Pond, and P. H. Maxfield of Greenwood City were the speakers. They spoke on the essential differences between the Socialist and all the other parties; of the wonderful growth of Socialism as a world movement; and of the immediate practical hope and benefits it offered to us, here and now.

Of course the big event of the evening was the supper. These beans baked in the ground! Oh! Just—oh! that's all. And they were actually baked in the ground—the only real way to evoke beans, of course—and by the old soldier, that master baker, Hon. George Harding. But no wonder they were so good—Tuesday was the seventh time he's had charge of the baking of beans in that same old oven of earth.

Those who weren't able to be at that lawn party Tuesday "missed it," and who were present are sorry for them. But "there up," next year there'll be another.

MID-SUMMER SALE

The Ladies' Aid of the Bethel Methodist Church will hold a mid-summer sale in the church vestry on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 20. Appropriate for morning wear, fancy work, ice cream, candy, food and numerous other things will be on sale and also a grand pot-depart where one can surely get their money's worth.

The decorations will be in charge of Mrs. H. P. Fickett and all who know her artistic taste will feel well paid to help and enjoy a summer treat, and share the decorations if anything more. You may see something you want. So, while you enjoy a job of home made ice cream, we guarantee you enough grand company that you can enjoy a pleasant hour.

A cordial invitation is extended to all.

BETHEL DAIRYING ASSOCIATION.

WEDDINGS

LORING-KING

On Tuesday afternoon, August 18, a very pretty wedding occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. King, when their youngest daughter, Carrie, was united in marriage to Mr. Paul Loring of Yarmouth, Me. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present.

The rooms were charmingly decorated with flowers and potted plants. Promptly at one thirty o'clock, to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march played by Mrs. John W. Carter, the wedding party entered the living room and took their places before Rev. J. H. Little, who performed the ceremony, the single ring service being used. Mr. and Mrs. Loring were the recipients of a large number of beautiful presents. After a short journey they will go to Campton, N. H., to reside, where Mr. Loring has a position with the American Realty Co.

Mrs. Loring has been one of the popular members of Bethel's younger set and prominent in musical circles. She will be greatly missed by her many friends.

A GOLDENROD WEDDING.

Miss Anna E. Friese the Bride of James Harold Young.

Miss Anna E. Friese, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey A. Friese of 73 Deacon street, was married to James Harold Young of 71 Deacon street, at the home of the bride recently. Rev. Dr. C. E. Rice of St. Paul's Universalist church performed the single ring ceremony.

It was a goldenrod wedding and the house was beautifully decorated with plants and flowers. The ceremony was performed under a goldenrod arch in which a goldenrod wedding ball was hung. The bride wore a blue traveling suit and carried bride roses tied with white ribbon. There were no attendants. Mr. and Mrs. Young left on the Twentieth Century Limited for Albany, N. Y. From Albany they will take the boat trip down the river to New York city and will go from there to Boston and Portland by boat, stopping a few days in each place. After October 1, Mr. and Mrs. Young will be at home at 711 Summer avenue. Mr. Young is a buyer for the Charles E. Lynch clothing store. (Springville Republican.)

ORANGE FIELD DAY.

With ideal weather and the county fair grounds in excellent trim for the event the Oxford county patrons of husbandry held their annual field day there Thursday, Aug. 13. A large and representative class of the county's citizens were present and the occasion so full of attendance and interest was most successful. Among the pleasant features of the day was the meeting by many of those present with High Priest C. M. Gardner of Massachusetts who is on a speaking tour in the State.

State Master C. H. Stetson arrived on the morning train with Mr. Gardner and State Lecturer C. O. Parington. After a slight evening trip through the village to L. E. McIntire's automobile they were taken to the exhibition park where the addresses were delivered during the afternoon.

Music was rendered until the noon hour by the Hebron Academy band and greetings exchanged by the patrons who were arriving all the morning. During the noon hour a picnic lunch was served to the speakers and press by the committee on arrangements which consisted of: J. H. Edwards, master of the Pomona; L. E. McIntire, the overseer; A. M. Ryerson, lecturer and the three lady officers, Miss Lizzie Hall, Mrs. L. E. McIntire and Mrs. E. H. Pike.

The subordinate orders throughout the county were well represented as many of the members have automobiles and at high noon the scene began to look like the county fair. A conservative estimate during the afternoon placed the number of persons at 1,000.

CARD OF THANKS.

In view of the kind and generous way in which our friends and neighbors of North Newry have sympathized with and aided us in our recent misfortune, we, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lord and family wish, in this way, to express our deep and sincere appreciation and thanks. Material assistance has come from so many quarters, and so frequently from those unknown to us, that it is quite impossible to thank each one individually. May this be regarded as a genuine, though of course, quite inadequate token of our gratitude to all who have been such true "friends in need." Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lord and family.

Only a day at a time, and that we can live. We know
The trouble we cannot bear is only the trouble we borrow,
And the trials that never come are the ones that fret us so.
Only a step at a time. It may be the angels bend o'er us,
To bear us above the stones that wound our feet by the way.
The step that is hardest of all is not the one just before us,
And the path we dread the most may be smoothed another day."

WAYS OF KEEPING A HOUSE COOL.

Keeping the house cool in summer is not always an easy problem to solve. People who have large houses and money enough to equip them with electric fans and other appliances can, of course, keep very comfortable, but it is more difficult to manage it in small houses.

Windows must be shaded with blinds, shutters, or awnings, and be well screened. All the heavy hangings should be removed and where possible the carpets should be taken up and cool colors, such as white, gray, light greens and blues, should take the place of the warmer colors. Then white muslin curtains soften the light, though many people object to even that much drapery.

The coolest hours of summer are the night hours. Therefore the night air should be allowed to circulate freely through every part of the house. The best circulation is obtained by having windows open at the top and bottom instead of entirely at the bottom. This lets out the hot air and lets in the cool. When this method is followed put the screen in the lower sash of one window of each room and in the upper sash of another.

As it is important that sunlight, too, should enter the house at some time of the day, open all the blinds and windows in the early morning for a little while. Then darken the house for the rest of the day.

It is especially important that the attic and cellar should have proper ventilation. In the former a skylight or window should be kept open night and day; except, of course, when it rains. The cellar windows should be open only at night when it is comparatively cool. Open them at sundown and close them at 8 o'clock in the morning. Neglect of this method of airing the cellar causes a great deal of trouble during the hot weather. If the windows are not closed during the heat of the day the warm, moisture-laden air enters the cellar and condenses on walls, pipes, metals, etc. The colder the surfaces the greater will be the amount of moisture that will condense upon it, and a few days of neglect will make the cellar so damp that it will not be a suitable place for keeping food.

Several devices may be used to cool the air. A modified form of the tattle, employed in India for this purpose, could be had in any country house. Make frames the same as for window screens and tack on these enough narrow tapes to form a support for a thick bed of grass. Now cover with long grass fastened to the frame by sewing with twine. These frames should be placed in the windows and kept wet. The air passing through them is cooled. A garden syringe may be used to spray them with water. As these screens are not especially ornamental they should be placed in windows that are not exposed to view. Three or four of these screens will do a great deal toward keeping the air in the house cool and fresh.

A simpler screen may be made by covering a frame with coarse flannel, which should be kept wet in the same way as the grass screen. It is not so effective as the tattle and it requires more care, as the flannel dries more quickly than the grass. Another way is to put flannel over the ordinary screens, wetting it from time to time. If one or two windows downstairs and a couple upstairs are fitted with these wet screens they can be open all day, thus keeping the air in the house in circulation.

In the South old sheets or pieces of muslin are often hung in the doorways that face the breeze, fresh water being thrown upon them as often as they dry out. If the piazza floors can be flushed and the water allowed to evaporate, the house will seem cooler.

This free use of water, however, should be confined chiefly to dry days, when the evaporation is rapid. On murky days little comfort would be gained. On these days one's comfort is increased if some of the moisture can be removed from the air, and for this purpose quicklime is very effective. Put large lumps of lime in earthen bowls and place about the rooms. The lime has a strong affinity for water and absorbs it from the atmosphere. The slacked lime which results may be used about the garden or the outbuildings.

WHY FIREMEN HURRY.

Little Ross, seven years, had been around the corner inspecting the fire station. He came home to tell his mother of what he had seen there. He said:

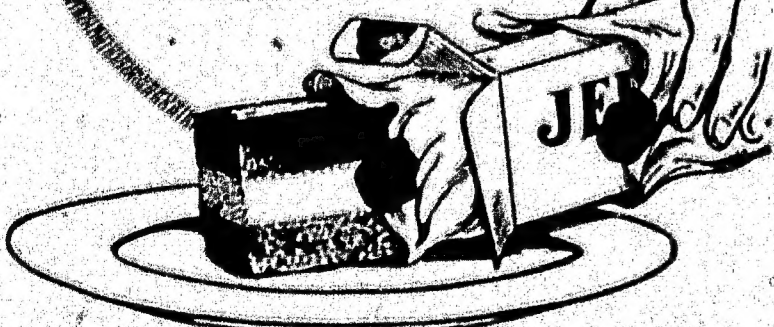

"And, mamma, if they are just in the middle of sweeping the floor, they drop the broom and rush off to the fire, and even in the night time when they are in bed, if the bell rings they jump up and dress and go to the fire—'cause if they didn't do that, when they get there the fire would be all out."—Deineator.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

For the third time since it became the residence of the chief executive of the United States, the Angel of Death has knocked at the door of the White House and called away the wife of the President. The first occasion was on Sept. 10, 1849, when Mrs. Letitia Tyler passed away; the second was on October 25, 1892, when the death of Mrs. Caroline Scott Harrison occurred; and the third was on August 6, 1914, when Mrs. Ellen Louise Wilson closed her eyes in the sleep that knows no waking.

Mrs. Wilson had artistic ability of no mean order and had many charming traits of character which endeared her to all who had the privilege of her acquaintance. The essential quality of her nature was best indicated by her interest in and work for others. She was especially interested in the movement for the education of the Southern mountain people, and in measures for the benefit of the poor of Washington.

On the morning of the day she died Mrs. Wilson said that she would be happy if she could be assured of the passage of what is commonly called the "Washington Alley bill"—and it is a pleasure to add that from both the Senate and the House there came the prompt assurance that the bill will soon become a law. And her last words to Dr. Grayson were "promise me that you will take care of Woodrow."

The whole nation extends its sympathy to the President and his daughters in their sorrow.

Shortly before it became known that Mrs. Wilson was dangerously ill it was whispered around that a new honor is to come to the President in February next when the stork is expected to visit Mrs. Francis B. Sayre. It is not yet known whether it will alight in the White House or the modest cottage in Williamstown, Massachusetts, where Mr. and Mrs. Sayre will live next winter. It will be remembered that Julia Dent Grant, now the Princess Cantacuzene of Russia, was born in the White House while her grandfather was President.

It begins to look as if Congress will remain in session until there is a rift in the war clouds now encompassing the whole of Europe, in which event much needed legislation will be enacted that would otherwise have been left until the short session of Congress in order that legislators could go home and participate in their primaries and, later, in the elections.

The President's anti-trust legislation program is moving along slowly but surely, and it is confidently predicted that within the next six weeks the bills dealing with the various phases of trust affairs will be out of the way and then, should the European war still continue, Congress would remain in session to take care of any eventualities that might arise to disturb the peace or the commerce of the United States.

Senators and Congressmen are discussing war, its causes and effects, while bulletins are eagerly scanned for news of a reliable character that will give the true situation as its exists in the great theatre of conflict now raging. Many conflicting views obtain among the nation's statesmen as to the probable effect the war will have on the United States, the prevailing belief being that it will result in higher prices for American products, especially food stuffs. There are those, however, who think they will be more than counterbalanced by the cutting off of certain countries from our markets and the wholesale impoverishment of the nations now at one another's throats. Be this as it may, it is most generally conceded that the time is ripe for the nation to put its best foot forward toward securing a larger trade with South American countries, now that Germany, which controls much of the trade, is engaged in a titanic struggle for its very existence. On tottering thrones, therefore, America may benefit immeasurably.

Washington society, what remains of it in Washington, is living an "al fresco" life. There are rabbits hostesses, and many congressional hostesses still by the sides of their distinguished husbands in spite of the reputation for the boiling point in temperature which Washington enjoys.

And there are festivities of course, for, as one hostess puts it, "one must dine, and why dine alone?" So there is scarcely an evening when a merry party does not gather on a porch, a picturesque lawn, or in a protected arbor in and around Washington, for the formal meal of the day. Secretary and Mrs. Daniels, who are living in a charming suburban home on a hill overlooking the city, are among the busiest of these hosts and hostesses.

Others who are following in these lines are Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, the Senator being the original of the "young lawyer in Rex Beach's novel, 'The Barter,'" who are in a lovely old place overlooking the Potomac on

POEMS WORTH READING

DON'T SEND MY BOY TO PRISON.

I strolled into a court house,
Not many miles from here;
A boy stood in the prisoners' dock,
His mother, she was there;
The boy was quite a youngster,
But he had gone astray,
And from his master's cashbox
He had taken coin away.

The boy addressed his Honor, While the tears rolled down his cheek,
"Kind sir, will you please to allow My mother there to speak?"
His Honor then consented
While the boy hung down his head,
And turning to the juryman,
These words the mother said:

"Remember, I'm a mother,
The prisoner there's my son,
And, gentlemen, remember,
It's the first crime he has done.
Don't send my boy to prison,
For that would drive me mad.
Remember, I'm a mother,
And I'm pleading for my lad."

The lawyer for the prosecutor
At her request rose,
And asked his Honor if he would Not make her to sit down.
He said it was disgraceful
And a gross insult indeed
For him to sit there on that bench
And allow that woman to plead.

The mother's eyes flashed fire,
Her cheeks turned deadly pale,
She said, "I'm here to try and save
My offspring from the jail.
I know my boy is guilty,
And own his crime is bad,
But who is there more fit to plead
Than a mother for her lad?"

The Judge addressed the prisoner,
In kind words did say,
"It pains my heart indeed, my boy,
To see you here to-day,
I will not blight your future,
But on your crime I frown,
But remember, it is because I have Some children of my own."

SLEEP.
He sees when their footsteps falter,
When their hearts grow weak and faint,
He marks when their strength is failing, and listens to each complaint;
So bids them rest for a season, for the pathway has grown too steep, And folded in fair green pastures, he giveth his loved ones sleep.

Like weary and worn-out children, who sigh for the daylight's close, He knows they oft are longing for home and the sweet repose.
So he calls them in from their labors,
ere the shadows round them creep,
And silently watching o'er them, he giveth his loved ones sleep.

He giveth it, oh! so gently, as a mother will hush to rest,
The babe that she softly pillows, as tenderly on her breast; Forgotten are all the trials and sorrows that assaile them weep, For with many a soothing promise, he giveth his loved ones sleep.

He giveth it friends the dearest can never this boon bestow;
But he touches the drooping eyelids,
and placid the features grow, Their foes may gather about them, and sterns may around them sweep,
But, guarding them safe from danger,
He giveth his loved ones sleep.

All dread of the distant future, all fears that oppress to-day,
That mist that clear in the sunlight,
has quietly passed away,
Nor call, nor clamor can rouse them from slumber so calm and deep, Only his voice can reach them, who giveth his loved ones sleep.

Weep not that their tolls are over,
weep not that their race is run,
And grant we may rest so calmly, when our work, like theirs is done;
Till then we would yield with gladness, our treasures to him to keep,
And rejoice in the sweet assurance,
He giveth his loved ones sleep.

NOODING MAINE.
A great mover, good and strong, is beams Maine, has gone forth;
It will reach every town from the south to the north;
All too long has the call to awake been delayed,
But at last it has come from our live boards of trade.
The advice "to go west" has lost millions to Maine;
We advise to come east and there will be no regrets.
None of our in times past have gone out from old Maine.

Nothing more wholesome,

William Tell Flour

To all parts of the world, to seek for tune and fame.
To be sure, some have found lovely homes and great wealth;
Many more, weak and worn, only find loss of health,
And now yearn with sad hearts to return once again
To the hills and the vales of good old Mother Maine.

Rushing streams, many scores, coming down from our hills,
With their force running waste, call for men and for mills.
Not ye men out of work, men of brawn
and of brain,
Come with us and make good in this grand State of Maine;

Build ye homes for yourselves, for your girls and your boys,
Where with wealth and good health, with sweet peace, love and joys
They can spend happy days, live a good helpful life, Free from ill, in some lands that bring sorrow and strife.

Untold wealth lies inert in our granite and rocks,
In our woods, in our mines, in our soil and our flocks.
Let's unlock and set free the vast stores which abound Everywhere on our coast, in the sea, under ground.

Our good air, water pure, healthful climate, charming scenes,
All invite willing hands, hopeful hearts, men of means,
To come forth and espouse with true zeal this great boom.

Let us put away self, stand aside and make room
For brave men with staid hearts who are leading the van.
Let us join, here and now, and help on all we can.

Now we want better roads, better farms, better ways, Better schools, of good works in all things, less delays.
Make our stream swarm with mills and our quarries with crews, Make our farms double up, give the boys some good news;
Let them share in receipts, give a roll
or a cow,
Fill their hearts full of cheer and a love for the plow.

Let all work as one man, let the world know we can Build up Maine, place her where she belongs—in the van.

TEMPERED WITH MERCY.

Rufus Washington was called to the bar of the court charged with the crime of stealing three frying-sized chickens. Rufus was excessively black and ragged to an alarming degree.

"Stand up, Rufus Washington," said the clerk.
"Have you a lawyer?" asked the Judge.

"Now, suh, Marso Judge, I ain't got no lawyer."
"Do you want to plead guilty?"
"Now, suh, Marso Judge, I doesn't want to plead guilty."

"Why haven't you got a lawyer then?"
"How kin I git a lawyer, Marso Judge, when I ain't got nothin' to pay him? Y'all knows I lives on Mr. Jim Barker's place and I wuks fo' him, and when de craps is done I wish I ain't got nothin' 'tall, and he don't give me no more rations, not twell planting time come 'roun' ergin. Deso hyar rags on my back all I got. How I gwine git a lawyer?"

The Judge looked hard at Rufus.
"Did you think of being your own lawyer?" he asked.
"Lawdy, naw, suh, Marso Judge,
but I did thought, suh, please, suh, you might give me a lawyer."

"All right, I'll give you a lawyer.
Take your choice." The Court's extended arm included in a generous gesture the whole of the assembled bar of Jackson County. Rufus hesitated hardly the tenth part of a second.

"Et I kin take my pick, den I picks you, Marso Judge." The Court smiled approval.
"You certainly pick wel', Rufus.
But I'm the Judge. I can't be your lawyer. Look at these other gentlemen. They are all better lawyers than I am. Take one of them."

Rufus Washington passed, and scratched his woolly head while his rolling eyes reviewed the bar.
"Et I kain't have you, Marso Judge, I reckon I picks dat air gemman over 'ar"—a skinny, black forefinger indicated the prosecuting attorney—they call him Solicitor down in Jackson County. The other lawyers grinned, but the Solicitor maintained entire gravity.

"Your second pick is 'nmost as good as your first, Rufus," the Judge said.
"But you can't have that gentlem'n.
That gentlem'n is the State's lawyer. His business is to see that you get in to jail—not to keep you out of it.
How about it, Mr. Solicitor?"

And the Judge turned to Rufus's second choice.
"Your Honor, has spoken," replied the Solicitor, "but though I cannot be the defendant's lawyer, I would like to call a witness for him."

"Proceed, Mr. Solicitor," said the Judge. And the Solicitor proceeded:
"I believe that Mr. James Barker is new in the court room? He is?
Yes. Call James Barker."

A coarse, hard, and prosperous-looking white man moved forward and stood by the rail that sat off the common herd from the privileged persons inside.
"Thank you, Mr. Barker," said the Solicitor suavely, "you may stay where you are. You need not actually take the witness stand. I merely desire a little information. I want to know, Mr. Barker, whether it is true that this defendant lives on your place and works for you."

"Yes, he lives on my place," said
Barker shortly. "He's a renter."
"And he works for you?"
"He works some for me, yea."

"He works for you in planting time, and ploughing time, and harvest time, and between times when he's not working you don't give him anything to eat?"

"Why should I?" replied Mr. Barker. "Didn't I say he was a renter."
"The man lives on your place," repeated the Solicitor, "and works for you and you let him starve?"

"Tain't my business if he starves," growled Mr. Barker.
"That will do—for the present, Mr.
Barker," said the Solicitor; and as he turned again to the Court, his voice took on the tone and timbre which served the old-fashioned court lawyer in the South as heavy artillery.

"Your Honor, this black man's first choice for his lawyer was the Judge of this court; his second choice was the Solicitor for this sovereign State.
He has thus entrusted his case to the law itself embodied in your Honor's person and the State represented, however, unworthily, in mine. I do not attempt to minimize the offense with which he is charged. It is a grave offense. But in the circumstances I move that this court turn him loose—provided" (the Solicitor paused and swung about sharply—"provided Mr.
James Barker will give here in your Honor's presence, his solemn promise to supply the said defendant with sufficient rations till planting time."

The Solicitor, the Judge, the assembled bar, the free citizens of Jackson County, white and black, congregated in the back of the court room—all stared at Mr. James Barker where he still stood beside the rail. Amazement upon Mr. Barker's countenance gave place to dismay, dismay to the expression which rural experience has identified as that belonging of right to a sheep-killing dog.

"I'll promise," he stammered. "I'll promise to feed him."
"The Court so orders," said the Judge grimly. "The prisoner is discharged."

"Thanky, Marso Judge, thanky kindly," quoth Rufus Washington.

WHAT LIFE IS LIKE IN HONOLULU

When The Ships Come In Then Things Are Doing

"ISLES OF TRANQUIL DELIGHT" Sometimes Islands of Riot and Killings yet Great is Hawaii

(M. J. Brown, Courier, Oregon City) It was an interesting and entertaining sight when a shipload of militia boys came in to Honolulu, went in bunches up and down the streets, from one saloon to another, and simply ran things. I don't believe these conditions would be tolerated in any city on earth except these most remote inhabited islands on the globe.

They would go from one saloon to another, in bunches from twenty-five to fifty, and simply turn things over. Big, husky fellows, but drunken, noisy and vile. It is stated that such is the climatic influence that stimulants, particularly whiskey, makes one who drinks too much, run amuck and do crazy stunts. That may or may not be true, but these sailors got the drunkest, the noisiest and the quickest of any bunch of men I ever saw.

A bunch of them went into one of the finest saloons of the city and made every man in it sit down.

"Sit down; you're rocking the boat," was the order, and the inmates either sat down or got out. They evidently knew what a bunch of men of war sailors were.

These fellows have only a short shore leave and they make the most of it. They see how quick they can get drunk and what crazy stunts they can do.

A group of the regular militia gathered around a fellow who was trying to climb a steel electric lighting pole. He couldn't have gone up if it sober, but he could try, and when he would fall and slide down, his companions would howl in mirth, and the vulgar language was unfit for even Chinese ears.

The sailors were on a tear of rebellion, I learned. They were with the Milwaukee, the boat that took the Oregon and Washington naval militia on cruise. They were out from Bremerton, Wash., and the ship had been out of commission for years. Through some loose cog in the commissary department it was ill fitted and poorly provisioned.

These regulars each take on a naval militiaman to teach him the game and there are as many of the regulars as the landmen. They don't like the job any too well, for as one of them told me "we have to do all the work. As soon as the 'lubbards' get tired, then we have to do their work and they are a bunch of pets, anyhow."

Then the chuck ran short and the regulars motified. They were going from one to another urging "don't go back to the ship," and I heard that the officials had a merry time of it taunting them up at leaving time.

Yet the police, native Hawaiians, are always busy somewhere else when the sailors come in. The liquor and gambling interests run the city and native policemen are easier to handle than white officials. Yet I noted the two morning newspapers are day after day protesting against these conditions. In the evening these sailors go to the park (they call it a park) and there mixed up with soldiers, they pack over from nearby saloons great quantities of beer in quart bottles and lie on the grass and drink. They have wrestling matches, fights and all sorts of sailor and soldier sports, and no sorer molest.

A ball game was on between two Hawaiian teams one night and the sailors had no end of fun trying to break it up. The field was small, and very often the ball would come out where they were, when they would promptly get it and throw it in the river. But here the soldiers interfered, or there would probably have been a riot.

Little Chinese girls will hang around these drinking crowds to cop the empty bottles, the "dead soldiers," which they sell. A soldier or sailor will occasionally catch one, take out his knife, and threaten to cut her pig tail off, then there will go up Chinese shrieks on the night air and from all over the park Chinamen, men and women, will come in droves. Then the girl is let go.

The soldiers are not as bad as the sailors, for the restraint is more. It means guard house and loss of pay to them if they get too bad, yet they are a bad lot.

They tell me there are about 8,000 on the island of Oahu, and about 90 per cent. of them are soldiers because they had been failures at something else.

I talked with one of the men and he said that nearly every private was there for some bad cause, getting into trouble, drink, failure, that they were the down-an-out, young fellows who enlisted as a last resort.

On a Sunday morning I witnessed a nasty shooting scrap that came nearly ending in a riot.

A Hawaiian policeman was told that a white soldier was packing a gun and had tried a hold-up. The cop went to the soldier and ordered his hands up. I was across the street, heard the loud talk, and saw the soldier resist arrest. The Hawaiian pulled his gun and the soldier ran. He was brought down with two shots, both in the head. In five minutes there were twenty or more soldiers after the cop yelling "Kill him; cut him; kick his head in."

With his big gun he held them off, backed down the street into a Chinese joint and held the place until the reserves came. If the soldiers had lived long the native would not have lived long, but they are not permitted to go armed.

In twenty minutes there was a search for witnesses. A plain clothes man, with a note book in hand, as if he was a reporter, asked me if I saw the shooting, and when I asked "What shooting?" he passed me up.

The Hawaiians are a splendid physical race, handsome, easy-living and happy. Their color is more like the Indian than the Negro, but in features they much resemble the southern negro of the States, only that the hair is black and straight, not curly. Nearly all the younger generation speak English, but with a brogue that is almost like the Alabama con.

Wandering along the wharf on a Sunday afternoon I found a bunch of Hawaiian girls in swimming and it was interesting to watch them. They were almost naked, but paid the least attention to we few spectators. And such diving and swimming. They would climb up onto the pier, make a run, shoot high in the air and then dive as gracefully as fish hawks. And the speed with which they can swim seems to be a Hawaiian secret. The propelling being done largely with the feet.

But in another letter I will take up Hawaiian life, as it is lived outside of Honolulu and try to give you an interesting insight of the life of a most interesting people.

Honolulu's climate is world famous, but I am inclined to think that, like southern California, it has been somewhat overdone. Yet when considered that these islands are in the torrid zone, the climate is indeed rare.

They say it is ever cool on the island and the temperature never goes above 90. The last statement has to be taken on trust, for certainly a thermometer couldn't be found on the islands, and as for it always being cool, it is if you find the cool place.

There is always a breeze, a cool, invigorating breeze, blowing in from the mountains, and not a day passes that you can't look up on those barren lava hills and see a local hail storm busy at it, while from two to five miles away the tropical sun beats down on you like a furnace from a cloudless sky. These local hail and rain storms continually form in the mountains; a dozen or more times a day, and they serve as fans for the city. And were it not for these I don't know how one could live there.

But one can't always find the mountain breezes. He may be on a street that shuts them off. They don't come into the restaurants, the stores and sleeping rooms. You have to go to them.

I have walked a block or two on some shut-in street, where there was not a breath of air and the sun came down in its awful straight heat, until it would seem I could not stand it, and then at the next block the mountain breeze met me, and in a minute I was cool and comfortable.

It's my judgment that the Sandwich Islands have the world stopped for a winter resort, but I believe they can be beaten in July or August, and before their name "Pacific Paradise" would be taken literally there would have to be a lot more of the English language spoken.

I expect the advertising managers of the promotion office would hang me in effigy if they knew this was being written, but I always write what the other fellows do not, and I want to say they grow the biggest cockroaches on earth here, and the most of them. In the hotels, and restaurants you will see them and out on the street—some so big a bird has a tough fight to kill one.

Eating a steak in a Jap restaurant (the only variety they have) I looked over at the lunch counter and saw about a thousand, baby size, running in and out of the cracks on the side. You can guess where my appetite went. And turning on the light in my room in the middle of the night about a dozen of the big brown fellows were dancing the halo on my dresser. And another point the hotels neglect to advertise, that the beds are mosquito screened.

Although foreigners are in big majority in the islands, very few can vote, and the native Kanakas have the majority voting power. There is a strong fight for prohibition being waged by the missionaries and the better class Hawaiians, and the liquor interests are becoming alarmed. The natives take to liquor as readily as our negroes, and intemperance is becoming a menace. And in the saloons you will see these signs:

"There is no hell, but there will be if Honolulu goes dry."

I saw two drunken Kanakas in a street fight one day, rolling over on the pavement and pounding each other. A native policeman across the street looked on and laughed.

A man and woman drove up in a buggy and stopped near the fighters, while the man went into a plumbing office. The horse became frightened at the men rolling over in the street, when the policeman ran across and held the horse until the scrap was finished.

Such is Honolulu.

But it's a beautiful country, in its fertile spots and one can well overlook the drawbacks. Everywhere there is tropical vegetation, and such a profusion. Great palm trees are everywhere and they are almost every tropical plant, and shrub grows there. And at night, when one stretches out on the grass, hears the most wonderful of all bands playing the most wonderful of all music; see people from half the nations of the world in like enjoyment—well that Hawaiian rest sort of gets into your nerves and makes you a booster like the rest.

And just as I was trying to get a poetical a Hawaiian flower girl came along. I was sitting in the park. I bought a bunch of flowers and she handed me this card. Perhaps she guessed I needed something to fill out on. Here it is:

Hawaii is harmony. Each day is a revelation. The land is hushed poetry in climate and in elements of a singularly fortunate location. It is perfect in its soft tone—dramatically natural in all its settings. It has the ultimate in colors—in flowers, in blooming trees, in strangely blending verdure, in "painted" ash from the mysterious depths of the kindly Pacific—Queen of the Seven Seas. With its cliffs and volcanoes, with its extinct craters graphically exhibiting the world in the making, it all clings to the end. Hawaii is satisfying, en-

GENERAL CONFERENCE AT NORTFIELD CLOSSES.

POST CONFERENCE STUDIES BEGINS.

A strong Sunday program brought to an end August 16 the General Conference for Christian Workers for the year 1914. The Rev. John Thomas, of Liverpool, Eng., preached the morning sermon in the Auditorium to a large audience, many of whom had come in from the surrounding towns. He took for his subject, "The Name that is above every Name." In the evening the Rev. Charles Brown, of London, gave the final address. Prominent among others who gave addresses were the Rev. Chas. Ingalls, the Rev. Robert F. Y. Pierce, of New York City, and the Rev. J. B. Davies, of Philadelphia. Dr. Pierce, who had been giving a series of blackboard talks illustrating religious truths, has proved very popular, and his talks have attracted large audiences. This closes the last of the six Conference and Summer Schools held in Northfield this season, the first of which began June 10. Both in attendance and work accomplished this is one of the best seasons Northfield has ever had. Today many of the delegates will wander to their homes, though a great number will remain to attend the Bible Studies.

For the next fortnight, although there will be no regular conference in session, there will be a great deal both interesting and instructive on the Conference grounds. The most important event will be two series of Bible studies conducted by the Rev. John Thomas, of Liverpool. To these Dr. Thomas gives the names of five great spiritual experiences. In these lessons Dr. Thomas will take up such vital topics as "What is True Authority in Religion," "What is the Nature of the True Church," "What are the Functions of a True Ministry," "A Great Challenge Based on a Great Love," "A Great Acquittal in the Great Judgment," etc. In addition to this, there will be two lectures by the Rev. John McDowell, of Newark, N. J., one on the "Life and Work of D. L. Moody," and the other on "Anthracite Coal Mining of Pennsylvania." Those who remain may secure accommodations in private boarding houses and at the Northfield.

The Post Conference days at Northfield, though not attracting such large numbers as attend during the regular season, has in years past proved among the most interesting and most helpful of the summer.

average increase will amount to one and one-half per cent., adding about $15,000,000 to the annual freight revenues of the eastern railroads. The poor old railroads may not have gotten what they deserved in this case, but they have run the country so long that no branch of the government appears to be outrageous enough to stand up for them.

WESTERN ROADS AFTER MORE COIN.

Increases in freight rates on all the railways west of the Mississippi river are being prepared for submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Managers of the western lines, according to the best information in official circles, are prepared to contend that they need more revenue to meet the increasing expenses of operation and to point out that their lines are in even greater need of relief than the eastern lines because of necessarily longer hauls and less density of population.

THE REPUBLICAN CHAIRMAN.

As the fall elections grow nearer, it is evident that there is to be a spirited contest in every part of the United States where there is a "fighting chance" to turn the fortunes of battle one way or the other. Naturally the south is undisputed Democratic territory, and although the Democrats have a big majority in Congress at the present time, the members of that party who are managing political affairs have rather marveled at the strategic skill displayed by the new chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee. It has developed that the minority members of the House had a definite idea of what they were doing when they chose Congressman Frank P. Woods of Iowa to conduct their campaign. Mr. Woods is a quiet political worker, and now that the campaign is on the Democrats are awakening to the fact that while they supposed nothing was being done that Chairman Woods has been building bonfires under them, and they are therefore put to the necessity of besting themselves in order to escape the conflagration. Woods has dispensed with all the brass bands, and if the gains that the Republicans confidently predict are realized in the November elections, then the reason will be because of the new methods produced by the Iowa political leader.

"A DEVICE OF THE DEVIL." Among the "mortuary tables" dug out by Representative Fowler of Illinois in the support of the belief that "the automobile is a device of the devil," he showed that 1616 persons were killed by automobiles in the year 1913, and 6,733 injured. The number of deaths occurring from automobiles is greater than those resulting from explosions, electricity, lightning, elevators and asphyxiation.

TIME WAITS ON ART.

Art appears to be slow-moving, particularly if the experience of the government with the contractor of the Grant Memorial is a fair illustration. Although the time has long since expired when this memorial should be completed, the sculptor has asked for and received a three years' extension, in which to complete the memorial that stands near the Capitol in Washington. This work was authorized in 1901.

SPRUCE BUD WORM

Reports are coming across the border from New Brunswick that the Spruce bud worm is doing great damage in that province and the authorities know no effective means of fighting the pest.

The Maine department of agriculture have had a great deal of the same affliction to contend with. The officials say:

"The increase in number of this insect, during the past three years, has given just cause for alarm among the owners of spruce, fir, larch, hemlock and white pine. We are constantly receiving letters from wild land owners and particularly from owners of summer camps who are dependent upon the beauty of their trees for a large part of their summer business, telling us of the enormous damage being done to their trees by this most serious pest. Many of the islands along the coast seem to offer particular inducements to this insect and here we find them especially abundant. Along the highways in every part of the State, evidence of their work is plainly apparent.

During the latter part of this season, parasites in the form of spiders have accomplished a great deal in controlling them and it is to be hoped that in another season we will find they have been more or less exterminated.

"The caterpillar begins feeding when the growth starts in the spring and becomes matured about the middle of June. It then transforms into a dark brownish-black chrysalis, emerging about ten days later into a small grayish-brown moth. The flight of these moths continues from the latter part of July, during which time they deposit their eggs in small oval patches on the side of the needle. These hatch in about a week and feed on the terminal shoots of the branches for a short time before hibernating as small caterpillars in a shelter near the bud. The larvae are about four-fifths of an inch long, reddish brown in color, with small, light reddish spots.

"In the woodlands we must depend upon parasites for their control, but in groves or where the trees are particularly valuable a better and most efficient method would be to spray with arsenate of lead, two and one-half pounds to 50 gallons of water, as soon as the new growth starts in the spring. Birds and other parasites also control them to a certain extent."

noon placed the attendance at four hundred. At a census of the granges taken twenty-two subordinate orders were represented and two pomonaes. Foxboro and Mansfield granges of Massachusetts were represented by Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Hayes and Miss Faye Howe.

The afternoon exercises which were held in the grandstand at half past one opened with a selection by the band, after which Pomona master, J. H. Edwards called the assembly to order and introduced worthy master, C. S. Stetson. During his remarks the State Master referred to the expense of time and money taken by the members also the time and work of arranging them and he hoped the members would feel well repaid for their efforts.

With fitting words, Mr. Stetson introduced High Priest C. M. Gardner whose address was most interesting and fitting for the occasion. He is a pleasing and forceful speaker and his remarks were delivered with a sincerity that impressed his audience. "Now England to the Front," was the subject of his address. In part he said: "Now England is coming to the front because of many practical things now being done by its people and the grange is assisting in the work. We are close together here, education is being more considered. Country improvement leagues are now being formed in some sections. Parcel post have been created. Interstate Commerce has assisted in regulating freight rates and a great co-operative spirit is helping us."

"Now England is well located for shipping facilities. The west is growing orchards but their freight rates are against them. Let us consider our shipping opportunities." He then referred to the variety of the crops possible to raise here. In the west it is one staple crop, whereas here we can raise such a variety. It is wonderful. In a Massachusetts exhibition 121 different staple agricultural products raised in that state were shown.

The agricultural products and the population are increasing and if necessary we can drain our swamps and double our supply of products. We have the land, let us work it.

State Lecturer C. O. Parlington gave a very forceful talk on the benefits of education. Briefly he said: "Among the callings of man today that of agriculture is most essential and the efficiency of our public schools depends upon their relation to the farmers. The people must be fed. There is much true wealth in farming and it is highly important that we use good seed."

Naturally the cities have led in the course of studies which have caused the people to move from their rural homes but the city boy knows nothing about the crops of the country as compared with the country boy. But more education should be given them in our country schools.

Seventy five years ago out of every 100 people 23 then lived in the country. Today only 11 do. All the increase is in the cities. There are 1260 more people in the country towns than there were twenty years ago.

The rehabilitation of the country is needed. More efficient country schools are needed. It may be they will cost more but why should not rural schools be well maintained? Some plan should be adopted to assist poor country towns in having more adequate schools."

BONOMO FOND.

Mr. Gilbert Rich spent Sunday at Oxford, going up on the excursion. Mr. Fred Murphy, who has been in Peru and Honduras for the past two months, arrived at A. B. Kimball's recently. He is now working for H. Merrill, driving a pair of horses on the State road.

Miss Vira Holt of Bethel was the guest of Mrs. Merrill, Oxford, Sunday. Messrs. Tom Lages, Herman Brown and Henry Hogg left Bethel, Thursday for Montreal, there taking the harvest excursion train for the west. Abner Kimball sold the Hopedale schoolhouse to Miss M. S. Sargent of Bethel.

Mrs. Mrs. Gerold of Cape Cod is visiting her sister, Mrs. E. J. McPhee. Mr. Jos. A. Rich is entertaining his brother-in-law, Dr. William B. North and Mrs. Gifford, of New York City.

STATE AUDITOR CALLAHAN TELLS OF CONDITION OF THE STATE'S FINANCES

Tax Rate for the Two Years Has Been Reduced; Some Other Facts.

Total cash in treasury Aug. 1, 1914, exclusive of any bond money, is $771,629.71. The largest cash balance on any Aug. 1 for over 25 years. Cash in treasury, including bond money, is $1,130,493.59.

That this administration reduced the tax rate for the two years. That it received for State taxes over $500,000 less than its predecessors. That it appropriated for the construction of new schools and public buildings, highways, bridges and public improvements over $1,400,000 more than the last administration.

That it has reduced the State debt for the 16 months to Aug. 1, 1914, $303,207.22, and if we include the payment of $200,000 of back bills left by its predecessor, the reduction would be over $500,000.

That the State returned to the 500 cities, towns and plantations, for school funds, railroad tax and other receipts more money than those same cities, towns and plantations paid into the treasury for State taxes.

The foregoing summarizes the facts contained in a letter addressed to Gov. Haines by State Auditor Callahan in which the conduct of the State finances during the past year and a half is reviewed. In his letter Auditor Callahan says:

"It has been the settled policy of this State for many years through its Legislature to provide liberally for the care and maintenance of its various State institutions, to appropriate for the construction of new buildings required for its several State normal schools and other State institutions; and to assist in the construction of buildings for charitable purposes, such as hospitals, as well as to aid the smaller towns by special appropriation for roads and bridges."

"The Legislature of 1911 departed almost entirely from this policy in so far as it relates to the aid of towns, and made no appropriations for the construction of new buildings for any State, charitable or educational institution for the years 1911 and 1912. As a result of this policy the Legislature of 1913 was confronted with larger demands than usual for aid from all over the State. To meet the many worthy calls for extra appropriations for new buildings from the various State institutions, and also to assist the towns in their highways, without increasing the tax rate for the two years, was an important problem before the Legislature of 1913. This was made all the more difficult because the State tax of 1912, which formed the principal part of the State tax receipts for 1913, was not enough to warrant any appropriation for new buildings but these demands were met and the appropriations made."

After giving a table showing the rate of taxation for the two years of the Plaised administration and the two years of the Haines and the amount received each year, the State auditor elaborates upon the figures given as follows:

"You will note that the State tax assessed in 1912 amounted to $1,309,731.97; you will also note that the amount received for State taxes by the Plaised administration in that year was $2,626,531.16, or $1,316,800.19 more than their total assessment. The amount of State tax for 1913 was $2,382,936.99, the receipts for State tax was but $1,571,262.42, or $811,674.57 less than the amount assessed. This comes about from the fact that only about 11 per cent. of the State tax assessed is received into the treasury the year in which it is committed, the balance coming in the following year. Of the $2,382,936.99 State tax for 1913, but $250,626.83 was received last year and $2,132,310.16 has been received thus far this year."

The total tax rate for the years 1911 and 1912 was ten mills upon the assessed valuation of the State. The total tax rate for the years 1913 and 1914 was 9.13 mills. It would appear as though the administration of 1911 and 1912 had the benefit of only 1.2 mill more taxation than the administration of 1913 and 1914. This would be so if the State taxes were received the year they were assessed, but as a matter of fact the Plaised administration had the receipts from the five mills of 1910 and the six mills of 1911, a total of 11 mills and the present administration have the receipts from the four mills of 1912 and the five mills of 1913, a total of nine mills.

To summarize, the Plaised administration assessed taxes for the years 1911 and 1912 of ten mills and received the receipts as 11 mills, a total for State taxes of $1,765,532.35. The present administration assessed a total tax for the years 1913 and 1914 of 9.13 mills and received the receipts as nine mills, a total for State taxes of $1,781,751.83.

ministration will receive for State taxes over $500,000 less than the previous administration.

The total amount of appropriation bills passed by the Legislature of 1911 for the years 1911 and 1912, including authority for temporary loan, amounted to $8,749,559.83. The total amount of appropriation bills passed by the Legislature of 1913, including authority for temporary loans were $10,185,792.11 or $1,436,232.28 more than for 1911 and 1912. In addition to this the Governor and council by council order appropriated from the amount received for automobile fees between Jan. 1, 1913 and July 13, 1913, when the new law went into effect, $119,119.70 among about 170 cities, towns and plantations.

"To state briefly the present administration will receive from the people in direct taxes over $500,000 less than the previous one and will return to the people by the erection of new buildings for schools and other State institutions, and the maintenance thereof, increases for charities, special appropriations for highways and bridges, (exclusive of any bond money) pensions for retired teachers, through the agricultural department for the better protection of cattle, marketing of farm produce, packing and shipping apples, etc., the expense of civil war soldiers attending the 50th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, claims of towns paid and other miscellaneous accounts including the automobile appropriation to cities, and towns, all totalling about $1,400,000 over that of 1911 and 1912."

In addition the present government paid deficiency bills of the last administration for which no provisions for payment had been made and which including the correction of an error of $12,763.96, in the Penobscot Indian trust fund, will amount to about $200,000.

After giving a table showing the extra appropriations for the past four years comment is made as follows:

"The above table is quite an object lesson to show how the respective governments of 1911, 1912, 1913 and 1914 appropriated extra money for the needs of the State for public improvements in buildings, highways, bridges and miscellaneous improvements. The Legislature of 1911 appropriated for these purposes for 1911 and 1912, $60,435.78 against $1,327,776.61 appropriated for 1913 and 1914 by the Legislature of 1913 a difference of $1,267,340.83."

The Legislature of 1913 also increased the regular appropriations of departments where it was necessary. "Another point I wish to call attention to is the fact that the total State tax of all the cities, towns and plantations in this State for the year 1913, exclusive of the wild land tax, was $2,153,273.23, and those same cities, towns and plantations received from the State for the year 1913 principally from the school funds and railroad tax, $2,165,262.41, which was more than they paid in. When these same cities, towns and plantations settle with the State for their 1914 tax the difference instead of being about $7000 to the good, will be over $200,000 to the good, or about ten per cent. of their total tax for 1913. This is brought about on account of the State tax for 1914 being 1.3 mill less than that of 1913."

"Notwithstanding the fact that our receipts for State taxes for the year 1913 and 1914 will be over a half a million dollars less than in 1911 and 1912, and our appropriation on account of public necessity increased nearly $1,500,000 over that of 1911 and 1912, and have paid nearly $200,000 of back bills of previous administration, exclusive of any money from highway bonds, we had a cash balance in treasury Aug. 1, 1914 (as can be seen in the report below), of $771,629.71, the largest cash balance on any Aug. 1 for over 25 years."

"The cash statement for the month of July with a true statement of assets and liabilities of the State on Aug. 1, 1914, herewith submitted, may be particularly interesting at this time to those speakers who seek to criticize the finances of the State and are giving the impression that this administration is running in debt or paying its bills on borrowed money. This administration has never borrowed a single dollar for a temporary loan to pay its bills, and is making it a practice in all departments to save the discount for the State on every discount bill by prompt payment of the same. An administration whose receipts from State taxes are over a half a million dollars less than that of its predecessor, whose appropriations for the benefit of its citizens are almost a million and a half dollars more than the one which preceded it; which has paid back bills of that predecessor amounting to nearly $200,000, and has reduced the State debt in 19 months $303,207.22, and if we should add, as has been the former practice, the back bills left over, to the debt of $1,249,663.92, as reported Dec. 31, 1912, it would make the reduction not $303,207.22, but over $500,000; which has in its treasury $1,130,493.59; of which $771,629.71 is general funds, the largest cash balance on any Aug. 1 for over 25 years."

"An administration with such a record can hardly be running in debt or doing business on borrowed money."

"At the election of 1912, the voters of Maine adopted an amendment to the constitution empowering the Legislature to authorize the issuing of bonds for building State highways. Under that authority State highway bonds have been issued and sold, and as this report shows, the money for the sale of $407,000 of bonds has been received into the State treasury up to Aug. 1, 1914. This money can only be used as the act provides, solely for the building and maintaining of State highways. These bonds and the interest on the same are paid out of the automobile license fee received and without any tax on the State."

"Before closing I wish to say a word regarding the business of this office. One of the progressive business measures passed by the Legislature of 1913 was chapter 217, of the public laws of 1913, which provides that all fees or income payable to any institution, board or commission of the State shall be paid into the State treasury, and all bills of institutions shall be audited by the State auditor. Under this act all bills of institutions and boards came more closely under the inspection of the auditor's office before payment; under this act all the receipts of the State prison are paid into the State treasury and all bills come through the State auditor's office and warrant drawn for payment like all other bills. Heretofore, the warden received all the money for merchandise sold and paid for all merchandise bought, with no auditing of his accounts by the State auditor's office. Every department head is urged to have all bills carrying a discount paid within the required time, this office giving an order for the State treasurer to advance the payment when necessary. In this way a large sum of money will be saved to the State each year. Payment of all current bills are met more promptly than ever before."

"How's your boy Josh doing?"

"Well," replied Farmer Cornsoll, "Josh is a smart boy and mighty well, but I'm going to have to send him to school some before I can depend on him for help on the farm."

"Why, he is a well-educated young man." "Yes, but he's got to specialise. I'm going to keep him studying geology until he can recognize a rock before he hits it with a plough."

BALL GAME AT WEST BETHEL LAWN PARTY

A very interesting game of ball was played Tuesday afternoon between the Bethel and West Bethel locals on the West Bethel grounds.

The game was full of vim from the start and showed that the teams were evenly matched, for the first seven innings it looked as if the Bethel boys were to get the small end, but at the beginning of the ninth they came back and placed their hits in safe places thus bringing in six runs, giving them the game with a score of 11 to 5.

Howe and Martin both pitched good ball. The holding of Thurston and Young were the features for Bethel while the "over the fence" hit of Grover's was the star play for West Bethel.

The return game will be played on Alumni Field next Saturday afternoon, and a good game is expected.

DR. C. M. COOLIDGE DEAD

Beloved Physician of North Waterford Stricken Suddenly.

Dr. C. M. Coolidge died at about 8 p. m., Wednesday, Aug. 12. He had been suffering from heart trouble and other complications for about two weeks, but had rallied and had been attending his patients for the past few days, driving by auto and team through the surrounding country. He and a party of friends went to a camp on the Kearsar pond for a day's rest. He started his auto for home and it stuck in the mud. He was taken suddenly very ill. His daughter, Marion, and Mr. Gay secured a team and started for home. After arriving home Dr. Sylvester was sent for. He was suffering terribly and Dr. Brabury of Norway was summoned by telephone, but before he arrived, Dr. Coolidge was dead. He had been a resident of No. Waterford for about twenty-five years and a constant practitioner of medicine during that time. He had won a host of friends from far and near, and was beloved by all who knew him. It seems impossible for anyone to take his place in the hearts of the people. He gave his life for them. One of his brother practitioners said a few days ago that Dr. Coolidge would die in the harness and so it was. He leaves a daughter, his wife having died while the daughter was a small child. He has been everything to her, taking the place of both father and mother. He would have been 50 years old on his next birthday. He has one brother, H. E. Coolidge, who practices law in Lisbon Falls. He has no other near relatives. Wallace Elliott and family accompanied him on his entry to the camp Wednesday. Augustus Manning, his wife's brother and wife, were on a trip around the White Mountains with Walter Lorr and Charles York and wife, when they received word of his death.

Dr. Coolidge was the second son of the late Dr. Charles A. Coolidge and Sarah Foster Coolidge of Canton. His early life was spent in Canton. On reaching manhood, he followed the profession of his father and located at North Waterford.

BLISS BUSINESS COLLEGE

Bliss Business College, Lewiston, Maine, has grown to be one of the largest institutions of its kind in New England. The total enrollment for last year was 522 students, 90 per cent. of whom were taking the combined course of study, which requires two school years for graduation. Out of the great number of the graduating class for the past year not a single one to date is unemployed.

The Bliss system of actual business, which is the result of years of study of its author, F. H. Bliss, published at Saginaw, Mich., and is in use from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean in the largest business colleges of each state. The Gregg shorthand system is used in the shorthand department and statistics show that out of fifteen hundred elites teaching shorthand in its public and private schools, 947 of these are teaching Gregg.
